NUMBER 29

The Lindsey-Wilson.

The graduating exercises Monday morning marked the closing of another successful year in this well-known institution of learning. Profs. Neilson & Moss, the principals should feel proud as they look back so far the progress the school has made under their management. They have been ably assisted in all the departments, and the subordinate teachers, as well as the principals, can truthfully say "we have used our utmost endeavor to give entire satisfaction."

During the year just closed there have been more grown pupils in attendance than ever before and the advancement has been rapid, perfect harmony prevailing throughout the year. One little drawback occurred about three weeks ago—measles got into the school, and a number of pupils left for their respective homes before the closing day. With that exception it has been an exceedingly prosperous and healthy year, and the outlook for the September opening is flattering.

The various entertainments given last week were of the highest order and fully up to the expectations of the many who attended. It was not so a representative of this paper could be in attendance, but judging from expressions from those who did, they were certainly entertaining, reflecting much credit upon the teachers and the performers.

The following recitals deserve special notice:

On Friday evening pupils of Miss Gibbs, assisted by those of Miss David, gave an interesting program and fully convinced the large audience which was present that they had indeed been well trained. Several solos and duets were rendered by the music pupils and were given in a faultless manner. Miss Howard sang in her usual pleasing way and the Glee Club also gave a number that was especially enjoyed. "The Princess" by Tennyson was the play given by Miss David's class on Saturday night and was indeed a success from beginning to end, especially as it interested so many to read the book. Each one deserved special mention for the rendition of his or her part. Miss David certainly is to be complimented on the success of the play, as measles interfered with many of the characters.

Dr. W. B. Ricks, of Bowling Green, one of the leading ministers of the Louisville Conference, delivered the Commencement sermon before the pupils and friends of the school Sunday morning at the Methodist church. The church was filled to its utmost capacity, and a very helpful and thoughtful sermon was delivered. His subject was Christ's character and it abounded in many wholesome admonitions to the pupils. Dr. Ricks also preached a strong sermon to a large congregation Sunday night.

Monday morning Mr. M. R. Gabbert and his sister, Miss Gertrude, were awarded diplomas. They made their acknowledgments in an oration and an essay. Mr. Gabbert's speech was a fine production and Miss Gertrude's essay was well written and entertainingly read. The address to the graduating class was delivered by Rev. W. B. Ricks, D. D., of Bowling Green.

Mr. and Miss Gabbert received many beautiful and useful gifts.

The people of Adair county are justly proud of the Lindsey-Wilson and its management. It has done more than any other enterprise to build up Columbia, and as the years come and go the people will continue to bless the day it was established. In due time the faculty for next year will be announced, Profs. Neilson & Moss remaining as principals.

He was one of the best citizens in Adair county and will be greatly missed by his friends and relatives. He was a devout Christian man and invariably was on the side of the right. He was about 70 years old. A very large crowd attended the funeral and burial. To those who were near and dear to him we extend our deepest sympathy.

In the two former States he had several married children. He found them enjoying fine health and doing well in their respective avocations. He was exceedingly well pleased with the west, and regards Oklahoma and Kansas as a fine farming and stock country. This year, however, the wheat crop will be short. Alfalfa is regarded as the most profitable feed growth. During Mr. Webb's stay in the west he became acquainted with a number of natives and he was treated most cordially by every one with whom he associated. He met a number of relatives he had not seen for forty-five years.

One Hundred and Two Years Old.

In last week's News we had a note giving the long life of Dr. William Volls, who is known to a great many Adair county people. Since then we have gathered the following history from J. W. Volls, his grandson: The old gentleman was born in Green county, Tenn., January 8, 1808, and died this past January. He was married four times and is the father of twenty-one children, ninety-three grand children and three great grand children. He is in perfect health, works some every day and can read ordinary print without glasses and hears as well as he ever could. We have his picture and the pictures of a son, a grandson a great grand daughter and a great great grandson, all taken together—five generations. All the parents live at Russells Spring, Ky.

The Municipal Board of this town has a code of laws governing said town, and the Marshal is ordered to enforce said laws. There is more complaint against the stock law than any other one measure, nevertheless, and the Marshal must do his duty. No one is allowed to let his stock run at large with the incorporate limits of Columbia. Therefore, when the Marshal picks up a cow or horse made the boundary, he is complying with his sworn duty, and should not be censured.

Quite a number of lady friends of Mrs. W. T. McFarland gave her a very agreeable surprise last Monday at the noon hour. The House Twain's Father Built.

During the early part of the seven years I subscribed for the book entitled, "The Innocence Abroad" the first one to give the author national notoriety after which Mark Twain was considered the world's greatest humorist and one of its ablest writers. It was more from desire to please the agent than from the book that I subscribed, but after it was received I found the description given of Palestine and all those ancient cities of the old world intensely interesting. At that time Isaac S. Remsen, an aged minister of the Christian Church, who lived seven miles south of Albany, Ky., was preaching monthly for the congregation in Rockhouse Bottom on Cumberland river, where we then lived. Being a man noted for his scholarship, Bible knowledge and general information, he was considered quite an oracle in all the country where he lived. In fact, he was known to know everything that I didn't know, which of course was very little, but so much so I determined to teach him something pertaining to the old world on his next visit to the Bottom, and when he came proceeded to deliver a rather lengthy lecture concerning the late conditions of things in Palestine, Damascus and several other ancient cities.

I also gave him a brief account of this wonderful writer who had lately sprang up in the west of whom I felt sure he had not heard. After giving a very respectful hearing he inquired who the author was. "He's a mark Twain," I said. "I then inquired if that his real name was Samuel L. Clemens, and I was told that it was. I then asked him if he had been in the west before 1853 when he was born. He said he had, and that the year 1853 in which John C. Clemens, Mark Twain's father, moved from Tennessee to Florida, Mo., he boarded at his house near the three forks of Wolf river and taught school in the neighborhood. Also that about one month previous to that time he had received a letter from Twain's mother, then a widow, Samuel L. Clemens and his wife, who were living in the same house in the neighborhood, and that he had received a letter from the Clemens and Lampton families. Of course I stood corrected and this was my last attempt at educating Isaac T. Hennock, who I still believe knew more than any man whom I have ever met. I have since learned that he died in 1887, and I am sorry to say that his misfortune to himself was that he had the misfortune to be born in a rather restless nest within itself, soon after the close of our late uneventful war with Mexico, with an old and cherished friend, Matthew Walkup, who lives in Memphis, Texas, and suggest that you, Mr. Editor, send him a copy of the news, if not a subscriber, as should be.

J. P. Darnall, Jr., Complimented.

The Danville Tri-Weekly Advocate has this complimentary notice of one of our young men.

"Jno. P. Darnall, who did graduate work in French and German at Central University last year has been signalized honored in Dantzig, Germany, where he has been teaching in the Government College.

"His term of six months service had expired and the Prussian Government was about to transfer him as the usual six months to another post, but he declined this offer and instead took a position with a French firm in Dantzig. There his ability, character and cordial disposition had made such an impression on the professors, students and citizens of the place that, contrary to all precedent, a special fund was raised in the city to retain him and a special release was secured from the Government permitting him to succeed himself. The authorities openly stated that he had done better work than any of the many foreigners they had ever appointed.

Mr. Darnall was formerly principal of the M. & F. High School, this place.

Don't wait until your wheat, oats or grass are damaged. See C. R. Hutchinson, Columbia, or Paul Wilson, Cane Valley, at once and get your order in for the great McCormick Binder, Mower or Rake. Yes, you can buy other makes for less money if you consider first cost, but how about the cost later on when you consider the repairs, loss of time and worry over a poor working machine. The McCormick always does the work and does it well. Ask your neighbor who has a McCormick. Your friend the Buchanan Lyon Co., Campbellsville, Ky.

Two Murder Mysteries Solved.

How Inspector Byrnes, who recently died in New York, established the famous dead line for crooks and how he instituted the third degree in worming confessions from suspected criminals, is told interestingly in an article in the New York Herald of Sunday. The dramatic way in which he solved two murders is told also in the following article:

The metropolis teemed with criminals, chief among whom were those aristocrats of theft, the bank burglars. The safes of those days were formidable enough in appearance, but they lacked the numerous contrivances and checks of the present day. The city was not so well lighted as it now is, and the police force was inconsiderable as compared with the army which is now on guard. The ferries were infested by bungo men, green goods operators and the like, and many were on terms of easy familiarity with small politicians. Wall street was alive with sneak thieves and burglars seeking plunder, while Maiden lane was periodically pilaged of plate and jewels.

Inspector Byrnes first established a branch of the Detective Bureau in a little room in a Wall street building, paying the rent out of his own pocket. He then, through General Brayton Ives, asked that the Stock Exchange give quarters for his men under its roof, which was accordingly done. The arrangement was most satisfactory, for by wire practically every bank or important broker's office in the district was connected with the bureau.

In this connection the order was given by the inspector that any man with a criminal record seen south of Maiden lane should be arrested, and the instructions were so literally carried out that the "Dead Line" proved an effectual barrier. In Wall street he met Jay Gould, who laid the foundation of his fortune.

The reorganization of the bureau in Mulberry street brought a galaxy of detective talent, trained after the manner of Byrnes. Those were the days when such men as Inspectors Schmittberger and McLaughlin and many others were winning their records.

The criminal classes were ruled partly by fear, partly by intimations of leniency for information given. They were afraid of the inspector, for he had a faculty of keeping watch over all their movements and often he was informed of their secret councils. He knew where they all belonged, their hates and their attachments, and with a skill which probably has never been equalled he balanced one evildoer against another.

The bank burglar was practically exterminated in his day. The sawdust men, the green goods manipulators and the gentry who lived by confidence and who had been working boldly, were driven to cover and the leaders were exiled.

The rule of the inspector was harsh and absolute and so effective to the last degree. The crooks were arrested on sight, irrespective of whether the magistrates held them or not.

Out of this method grew the third degree, which was in reality the use of psychology of a most practical kind. Its first application by the inspector was in solving the mystery of the killing of Louis Haniere, who kept a French wine shop in West Twenty-sixth street. He was shot in 1882 at the head of the stairs on which he was descending to the lower floor, which had been wrecked by a band of ruffians.

The inspector enlisted the services of a woman to keep track of Michael E. McGloin, one of a band of young desperadoes known as the "Seventh Avenue Gang," and he also obtained information concerning three others whom he believed to be implicated. All the quartet were so taken that no one knew of the other's arrest.

The inspector had McGloin taken into his private room and so placed the chairs that the prisoner would be looking out of the window into the court yard. As the inspector and he were talking a man entered the room and laid down on the desk the pistol with which the French innkeeper had been killed. The inspector looked at it in a casual way, referred to it as the weapon which had been used by the murderers and asked McGloin if he had ever seen it before.

The prisoner, although the sight of the weapon had unnerved him, tried to keep up an air of concern, although the inspector already had caught the expression of momentary dismay on his face. Then, calmly smoking a cigar, the chief of detectives referred in a matter of fact way to three men, all of whom had seen the murder, for they had said so.

Then, in the court yard walking between two policemen, marching first one and then another of McGloin's intimates.

The prisoner fell on his knees before the inspector and confessed that he and others had gone to wreck the saloon because its proprietor refused to be taken in by a film game, and that he had fired on him, intending only to scare him. McGloin was executed and the other three men were sent to prison.

Tactics still more dramatic were employed in the case of Unger, suspected of killing and dismembering his roommate, named Bohles, and of then shipping his body from Brooklyn to Baltimore. Unger was taken to police headquarters, where he was put casually into a cell which had been furnished with the blood stained appointments of the room in which the murder had been committed. He fell to the floor from the stained bed on which he had been forced to sit confessed the crime.

Many a time was the third degree worked in the time of Inspector Byrnes, its chief factor being the conscience of the man played upon by the shrewd and forceful mind of the master detective. Fiction and the drama since have made use of the third degree as a theme, but to the inspector it was regarded as a means to an end and in his hands it was the most effective of weapons.

News Correspondence.

The Democrats, assisted by a handful of fighting progressive Republicans, have forced the administration to abandon some of the worst of the corporation-servicing clauses placed in the railroad regulation bill by attorney General Wickersham.

Wickersham framed this bill after a conference with six railroad presidents. Wall street knew long in advance of the public appearance of the bill that it would be so drawn as to annul the Sherman anti-trust law. Railroad interests bought a solid stock on the strength of their advanced information.

Had the railroad regulation bill become a law as prepared by Wickersham, it would have practically destroyed all that has been accomplished in the last twenty years to give the government some measure of control over the railroads of the country.

No Attorney General of the United States has ever been revealed in just the position Mr. Wickersham now occupies.

Instead of having drawn a bill that would tend to place greater safe-guards about the rights of the people of the United States, as might naturally be expected from a public officer who is receiving a salary on the assumption that he is giving such protection to the people. Wickersham has been charged on the floor of the Senate with having attempted to take from the Irish Valley Church May the 27th to 29th.

the reply. "But I have even more respect for the welfare of 90,000,000 people of this country. The President sends the Congress a railroad regulation bill which the best authorities say absolutely annuls the Sherman anti-trust law, which is the only safe-guard the people now have against the combining of the big railroads. Along with this bill comes the ultimatum that our vote on the measure will be considered a test of our Republicanism. We are desirous of showing all proper respect for the President, but as between serving our conscience or the President, we are put to the painful necessity of forsaking the President temporarily and of voting against his railroad bill."

The recently "reformed" House Committee on Rules is proving to be as secure a catacomb for proposed legislation antagonized by the special interests as was the old Rules committee of which Speaker Cannon was chairman. Not a single resolution which might adversely affect unlawful combinations such as the sugar trust has been reported favorably by the new committee. Cannon dominates the reformed body just as effectively as he did the old Rules committee. So far as practical results are concerned, it is difficult to see what the common people gained by the enlarging of the committee and the elimination of the Speaker.

The Two Sinners.

She was a woman, worn and thin, who the world condemned for a single thing. They cast her out of the king's highway, and passed her by as they went to pray. He was a man and more to blame. But the world spared him a breath of shame. Beneath his feet he saw her lie, but he raised his head and passed her by. They were the people who went to pray at the temple of God on the Holy day. They scorned the woman, forgave the men; 'twas ever thus since the world began. Time passed on the woman died; on a cross of shame she was crucified. The world was stern, and would not yield, and they buried her in the potters field. The man died too, and they buried him in a casket of cloth with a silver brim, and said as they turned away, "We have buried a noble man today." Two mortals knocked at heaven's gate, stood face to face to inquire their fate. He carried a passport with an earthly sign, but see a pardon from love divine. Of ye who judge 'twixt virtue and vice, which think ye entered paradise? Not he whom the world had said would win, for the woman was ushered in. Ex.

Potatoes are an excellent feed for all kinds of hogs and when they are as cheap as they are this year in some localities, they may be fed with profit. Tests of their feeding value for fattening hogs have shown on the average that 4 or 5 pounds of potatoes equals 1 pound of corn. Brood sows do well on potatoes either before or after farrowing. For them as for fattening hogs or pigs it is best to boil the potatoes and feed some grain along with them. About 20 pounds of grain to a bushel of potatoes makes a combination that appears to satisfy the appetites of the hogs and produces excellent results. The cooked potatoes are mashed and mixed with whatever ground grain or shorts that is fed. One should avoid making the slop very thin or the hogs will be forced to take in more water than they naturally would drink. This would not affect them seriously, but it is not desirable. The potatoes are especially beneficial for brood sows because of their bulk and their mildly laxative effect.

Poultry Terms.

Every person who keeps poultry should at once learn the use of poultry terms. A pullet, for instance is a female bird less than a year old, while a cockerel is a male bird less than a year old.

Professionals designate a male bird over one year old as a cock, though on the farm we often say rooster. The female bird of like age is of course called a hen.

The young of a hen is called a chick until its sex can be distinguished, or possibly even till one year old. A brood is a collection of chicks cared for by one hen or in a single brooder.

Thirteen properly constitutes a setting of eggs, though many poultrymen now sell fifteen for a setting.

A bird weighing two pounds or less, and from six to twelve weeks old, is called a broiler. When it weighs over two pounds it is called a spring chicken.

A stewing chicken weighs about three pounds, and a roaster four pounds or more.

A male bird deprived of its generative organs to improve its flesh and weight is called a capon. A pullet similarly treated is called a poulard.

One male and two females constitute a trio. A breeding pen consists of a male and six to fourteen females.

A male goose is called a gander, a male duck a drake, and a male turkey a tom. A turkey in its first year is a poult.—Industrious Hen.

And he Means so Well!

Before the close of his present term which, at the present writing, is profuse in its promises of being his last, Mr. Taft should in attaining to an excellent understanding of baseball. The knowledge is like to be acquired at the failure of his Administration.

While he has been away from home on his latest trip, getting a line on the prospective pennant chances of the Cubs and the Pirates and first hand information as to the difference in speed between the Nationals and the Americans, his railroad bill has been trampled to death in the House and disembowled in the Senate. The Old Guard has been stampeded, the insurgents are out of the asylum grounds. The session, so far as the seeming possibility of legislative results is concerned, is at an end.

And the worst of it all is that Mr. Taft meant and still means so well.

His railroad rate bill, now "ruined, ravished and flung in the ditch," was not drawn for the purpose of delivering the country into the hands of the railroads. Its traffic agreement and merger provisions were neither more nor worse than a recognition, in the first instance, of a necessity; in the second, of a condition. The commerce court feature, with the provision for prosecution by the Attorney General's Department eliminated, was distinctly good. With an Interstate Commerce Commission that knew its business and did its duty, the railroads, had the bill become law, would not have gone as free as they now do of governmental checks and balances. The shipper and the community would still have had their day in court. The recogni-

Roosevelt Not an Insurgent.

The latest political news is that Theodore Roosevelt is not an insurgent and is an endorser of the Taft Administration, and that he approves Taft as a second term candidate.

If this is true it means nothing more than that Theodore Roosevelt's sermons are slush and that his sentiments are those of Aldrich, of Cannon, of Payne and of the other machine Republicans.

Is this true? We cheerfully confess ignorance. But it is not wholly improbable.

In office Mr. Roosevelt was as thoroughgoing a stand pater as

Mr. Aldrich. He preached moral platitudes, but he practiced paractical politics. He called on the public to witness his virtue and he call on the late Edward H. Harriman to read his message to Congress, and, perhaps, to edit it. His public utterances all reduced themselves to the statement, "I am the most righteous man in politics." His private policy was expressed in his statement to a railroad king, which had reference to a political deal and which was "you and I are practical men."

"But, granting that Mr. Roosevelt is nothing more than a political charlatan, which he would be amply proven to be if he should come back and endorse the Republican gang despite the record made since his departure. Is the doughty Colonel unwise enough to destroy himself as a world figure by endorsing Taft and stultifying himself.

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the puny, crying baby, for the child who refuses to eat and is restless in his sleep, and for the crisis of health. The proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. This is a rule which is very important, as with it comes a clear and a light sleep. But it is good appetite and sound sleep. What to give the child in the morning is a question of great importance. Cathartics are too strong and salts too strong, but the cause of the trouble is the cause of their bad taste. Have you ever given a child a glass of water with a liquid tonic that families have been using for years? It is a good tonic, mild, pleasant-tasting and promptly effective. It is good for you as well as for the child, but it is not good for him to take it.

Dr. Caldwell would like to send you a sample bottle free of charge. In this you will try it and when convinced of its merits, you can buy one dollar a bottle, just as thousands of Mr. D. W. Standish, Greenfield, as well as that of Mr. A. F. Johnson of that way and now write that it is their remedy. If you are unfortunate enough to have a sick child, one given to constipation and indigestion, give him a free sample of this remedy.

Dr. Caldwell would be pleased to give you any medical advice you may need concerning the family pertaining to the stomach, liver and intestines. Write him and he will explain your case in a letter and he will send you a sample. For the free sample simply send your name and address. For either request the address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, R. 200 Caldwell Building, Louisville, III.

Democratic newspaper devoted to the interest of the City of Columbia and the people of Adair and adjacent counties.

WED. MAY 25, 1910.

Coincident with the passing of Halley's comet, to remain beyond the reach of vision, in the broad and boundless expanse of the heavens for seventy-five years, the Republican party gives many assurances of its passing from power, and no political astronomer can definitely figure its return. As the comet's closest proximity to the earth was feared by many, and as its flight has given peace of mind, so will the gazing, gouging, gone Republican policies bring hope, cheer and ease to those who earn bread by the sweat of the brow. The many wrangles in Congress, the divided political entiments of the various sections of the country are making broad inroads in the party in power. The closer the policies of that party get to the people, the clearer the light shows their inequalities, the greater the apprehension of danger. It founded the powerful trust, established the system that enables the classes, the interests, to unjustly collect millions from the earnings of the great body of people. There is no justice in taxing the working people on everything they use to enable the rich to become richer and to maintain wild and reckless extravagance and pomp in Washington. The present situation comes largely, from Republican Senators and Congressmen who assert that a change in the policy of the party is necessary for the welfare of the people. They made, with the Democrats, an ineffective fight against the present high tariff law. They are in open rebellion against the autocratic power vested in the Speaker and the war is waged against Connonism which is certain to win in the next Congress.

The President, seeking the good will of both sides, must soon uncover and openly and boldly espouse the cause of the people or live up with the stand-patters, Cannonism and wealth. He can not reconcile nor much longer keep himself on neutral ground in the crisis through which his party is passing. Not only many of the able leaders of his party are out of harmony with party solidarity, at the expense of justice, but a large and increasing number of the voters are against a high tax on the things the people are compelled to buy. High tariff, protection to infant industries, the pretence against trusts will not longer be accepted. The next Congress is as certain to be a Democratic body as indisputed conditions can foretell. We have passed through the tail of the comet. We are emerging from a system with the hope and belief that a square deal, an honest opportunity will be the outcome for all.

Mr. Roosevelt rode in the eighth carriage at the funeral of the late King Edward.

The passing of the comet has lifted the fears and uneasiness from the minds of many who strongly imagined that great harm would encompass this terrestrial ball and that life would be endangered. Fortunately such fears were entertained by few while the larger part of the people pursued the even tenor of their way, undisturbed, and looking fondly for a great phenomenon, a great light that would illuminate the heavens and broaden the view of its path, were sorely disappointed. During the hours in which the earth was to pass through the tail of the comet, when expectancy was at its highest point, no one was able to discern any change from the ordinary. Of course such a shortage in its brilliancy can not be charged up to the astronomers who gave the world light as to its coming, its movements and its probable effects, it was the result of sudden changes without notice, and possibly to keep from great fright those of the inhabitants of earth who feared that a great and terrible calamity was inevitable. If calculations are correct its return will never cause a fear to any one who has had sleepless nights over its passing this time.

The appointment of J. M. Sharp, of Williamsburg, to the Attorneyship of the Eastern Kentucky district, and the appointment of Geo. W. Long to the Marshalship of Kentucky were sent to the Senate Monday. Mr. Sharp was selected by Hon. D. C. Edwards.

Mr. E. G. Asher, of Pineville, spoke to a fair audience at the court-house Monday afternoon in the interest of Mr. Caleb Powers, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Congress. We did not hear the speech, but we take it that a number of Mr. Powers' friends, who were present, were well pleased with Mr. Asher's presentation of the claims of the Knox county candidate for Congress.

Many Democrats of Tennessee met in mass convention at Nashville last week and placed an independent ticket in the field, declaring in their resolutions for an untrammeled judiciary. Judges of the Supreme Court and Judges of Court of Civil Appeals are to be elected. Gov. Patterson was severely attacked, and reference to the late Senator Carmack elicited great applause. The people of Tennessee are determined to shelve Patterson, who is a candidate for re-election to the office of Governor.

King Edward.

Born November 9, 1841, at Buckingham Palace.

Ascended the throne January 22, 1901.

Reigned nine years, three months and fourteen days.

Married March 10, 1863.

An enthusiastic sportsman.

His love of cards amounted to a passion in youth.

In stature below the average height, stockily built.

Markedly tractful as a man and monarch.

In his personality frank, loyal, warm-hearted.

A "good fellow," he demanded always the deference due his rank.

Educated by private tutors, and at Edinburgh, Oxford and Cambridge.

In 1860 made a triumphant tour of the United States and Canada.

His life twice despaired before he became King—in 1871 and again in 1898.

His coronation in 1902 a pageant of almost unparalleled splendor.

His short reign peaceful, after the conclusion of the Boer War.

His life several times attempted through violence.

A great traveler.

Always showed a marked preference for Americans.

King George.

George Frederick Ernest Albert, second son of the late King Edward.

Born June 3rd 1865.

Spent two years in Great Britain's navy when young man.

Became heir-apparent to throne in 1892 when elder brother, Clarence, died.

Married Princess Victoria of Teck June 6, 1893.

Has six children, Edward Albert, the oldest, now Prince of Wales.

Less Democratic than father and court expected to be marked with great solemnity.

Little love for sports.

As Unlike as we Are.

Horses differ from one another as much as people. Some are dull, stupid, unintelligent. Some are quick to learn, alert to all that is going on, and seldom annoy you by a careless blunder.

One horse steps on you, crowds against you in the stall, handles himself like an awkward boy, not because he means too, but simply because he doesn't know any better, and never will. Another never steps on you and never does the careless, stupid things because he was born with more horse sense. To punish any horse for a fault that in another might be justly worthy of correction is often to show less intelligence than the horse.

According to the Associated Press congress will adjourn before the middle of June, and possibly by June 1, it is believed by President Taft and the administration leaders. And before that it is expected most of the so-called administration measures now before congress will have been passed or, if not, they will be in such shape that they can be enacted unto law soon after congress meets in December. The statehood bill has passed the house, one conservation bill has passed the senate, and the anti-injunction bill is almost ready to be reported favorably to the house. Of the five measures the postal savings bank bill, the president has been told, is in the greatest danger, for, although it has passed the senate, it will have a rough time, it is said, in the house committee on post-offices and post roads, to which it was referred. President Taft has signed the first of the proclamations providing a reclassification of the lands in the national forests, which will throw 4,000,000 acres out of the forest reserve and make them available for homestead entry. More than 30,000 are ordered out of the Pecos national forest in New Mexico, and nearly 13,000 acres are added.

NOTICEJORDAN PEACOCK

The best breeder in Kentucky, will make the present season at his home in Gradyville, Ky., at $15.00 to insure a living colt, sound and right.

JORDAN has sired more colts than any horse in southern Kentucky, and his colts are the ones that bring more money than any others; they are the colts that the farmer gets his own price for; they are the colts that the lovers of fine horses from other States come to this country to buy; they are the ones that have put other stallions out of business in this country. JORDAN is the horse that has stood the test and has proven to be the best. He is the only horse in this country that ever sired a colt which sold for $700.00 at 2 years old. There have been a number of JORDAN's colts that sold for from $300 to $700, and a number of them 3 year old and over sold for from $500 to $1,000. Has any other horse's colts in this country sold for half of these prices? If they have, some one will please say something about it through the columns of the News, I want to know where they are? Don't let the other fellers make you believe their horse is as good as JORDAN, for you know it is not. Bring your mare to JORDAN and get a colt and a good one.

HIGHWAY:—My fine Jack HIGHWAY is 4 years old and is the best Jack I have ever seen in Adair county. He will serve a limited number of mares at $10.00 to insure a mare with foal. Plug mares will not be bred to this Jack. All care taken to prevent accidents, but not responsible should any occur.

Money due when mares are traded or removed from the neighborhood. Feed at cost or pasture at 50¢ per week.
